A Robbins furniture company is planning to close two plants in a move that will impact 188 employees.

Officials with Klaussner Furniture said Monday that none of the people will be laid off. They will be given the opportunity to move to Klaussner locations in Asheboro and Candor.

Company officials said they are shifting resources in hopes of growing the retail arm of their business. One of the plants in Robbins will become a warehouse facility.

Employees who choose not to relocate will be offered a severance package, according to company officials.
