N.C. get funds for water hook-ups

Charlotte Business Journal

Four N.C. communities will receive a total of $1.4 million in federal funds to connect low- and moderate-income homes to drinking water.

The money will be used to install or replace 15,300 linear feet of public water lines.

The funds include $308,500 for Catawba County and $225,434 for Union County.

The community development block grants are awarded to local governments to eliminate severe water and sewer problems. The maximum award per project is $750,000.

The funds are provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to the N.C. Department of Commerce.
